

Introducing the Trainer Standards

What Are the Trainer Standards?

The five Trainer Standards capture the knowledge, skills, and abilities that we would like to see in state-approved trainers. The standards:

- Offer a shared language to talk about trainer preparation and support.
- Create clarity around expectations for trainers and training programs. For more information, please review the publication DCYF's State-Approved Training Program (EPS_0061) available online at www.dcyf.wa.gov/sites/default/files/pubs/EPS_0061.pdf.
- Guide professional development planning.
- Inform the development of professional learning for trainers.

How Are They Structured?

Each of the five standards are made up of competency areas. Each of the competency areas are further broken down into indicators that range from foundational to more advanced.

Professional Growth and Development

The Trainer Standards define what professionals need to know and be able to do. They may be used by trainers, trainer mentors, and individuals who supervise trainers to decide what type of professional development and learning would be a good fit for an individual.

There is a self-assessment at the end of the Trainer Standards for trainers to identify strengths and opportunities for future growth.

If you currently support trainers in your organization:

- Become familiar with the Trainer Standards.
- Use the Trainer Standards to guide reflective conversations with trainers.
- Consider providing access to ongoing professional development related to the standards.
- Conduct annual evaluations that include trainer observation, participant evaluations, and self-reflection.

Trainer Observations

The Trainer Standards were used to revise the trainer observation rubric. The rubric is used during initial trainer and ongoing trainer observations. The rubric aligns with the observable and measurable indicators. The goal of using the revised rubric is to provide trainer applicants and current trainers with detailed feedback across the standard areas so that they can continue to strengthen their practice.

Looking Into the Future

Now that the Trainer Standards are revised, the Professional Development Team will begin developing support tools to understand each of the Trainer Standard areas better. We are exploring short informational videos, learning communities, and trainings to support state-approved trainers in mastering the knowledge, skills, and abilities that are captured in this resource.
