

Juvenile Rehabilitation

Future, Transition & Reentry Planning

Juvenile Rehabilitation (JR) strives to make communities safer and help youth and young adults returning from confinement to become productive citizens. Successful reentry is based on a strong, culturally-responsive continuum of care and support, effective treatment services and case management practices, comprehensive education, vocation and employment programs, inclusion of family/natural supports, community-based connections, and venues for meaningful individual voice (Executive Order 16-05: Building Safe and Strong Communities through Successful Reentry).

Future Planning

Planning for a young person's future begins at admission and continues throughout an individual's stay. This includes a series of initial and ongoing assessments to identify and update treatment, education, medical needs, essential rehabilitation, and reentry services. There are additional assessment tools used for determining release, parole eligibility, and transition to less restrictive community-based programs.

Planning activities include engaging family and natural supports, identifying housing options, connections to relevant therapeutic supports, education programming, and healthcare services to create a future plan.

DCYF does not discriminate and provides equal access to its programs and services for all persons without regard to race, color, gender, religion, creed, marital status, national origin, sexual orientation, age, veteran's status, or presence of any physical, sensory, or mental disability.

*If you would like free copies of this publication in an alternative format or language, please contact DCYF Constituent Relations at 1-800-723-4831 or email communications@dcyf.wa.gov.
DCYF PUBLICATION JR_0019 (11-2023)*

Upon Entry:

- Campus placement and orientation
- Screens and assessments (wellness, clinical, safety, medical)
- Risk/needs assessment
- Clinical screens and assessments
- Family/natural supports engagement
- Tribal connections
- Youth and family Future Planning Meetings
- Future plan
- Housing supports
- Medical assessment
- School partnerships
- Employment pathways

Future Planning

- Youth and family Future Planning Meetings
- Future plan updates
- Medicaid coverage
- Case review
- Housing supports
- Legal notifications
- Legal obligations (financial, community service, parole conditions)
- School partnership
- Preparation and transition to least restrictive community-based programming.
- Employment pathways
- Health care connections
- Essential documents (Washington State ID, Social Security card)

Note: The elements above are not in order.*

Washington State Department of
CHILDREN, YOUTH & FAMILIES